F9 tells the story of Massimo (Michele Morrone), the heir to a major criminal organisation who doesn't just insist on having the top three buttons of his shirt open at all times, but who is also not afraid to get his hands dirty to take care of insubordination, and who doesn't know the meaning of the word "no"; qualities which are exactly what one looks for in a romantic hero.

After an altercation which leaves him close to death, Massimo has a vision of a woman which takes over his life, and five years of searching later, in Sicily he finds Laura (Anna-Maria Sieklucka), a Varsovian hotel sales director in a stable yet unfulfilling relationship, celebrating her 29th birthday. In a gesture for the ages, Massimo quite literally sweeps Laura off her feet (with the help of a tranquilliser and some hired heavies), holds her captive in his villa and then makes her a life-changing offer: stay with him for F9 and fall in love with him. If she doesn't, Laura's told that she's to leave, though the truthfulness of that last part of the offer is a little uncertain, given he's the head of a criminal enterprise.
